Do you have an adaptation strategy?

How do you feel about adaptation strategies?

What are the top 3 most important things for an adaption strategy, from your perspective?

What needs to be in place before an adaptation strategy can be successful?

Governance

An adaptation team resource commitment.

Management buy-in informed buy-in Political will to act

carbon reduction

Collective will and understanding of risks

What needs to be in place before an adaptation strategy can be successful?

Communication

Needs to be resourced seen as priority

resource

Route for actions or priorities to be implemented

Buy-in. For organisations, top down and bottom up.

buy-in local buy-in

What needs to be in place before an adaptation strategy can be successful?

leadership

A thorough shared understanding of what adaptation means, dedicated resources, governance, top-level support

Adaptation is recognised as part of the day job for everyone resources

practical

Challenge of measuring success

Political will

What needs to be in place before an adaptation strategy can be successful?

Stakeholder buy-in; financial support; implementation plan, KPI's

Understanding and buy-in by senior management

Hope

equity do-able

Resource

Properly funded. All engaged, seeing this as a priority. Hearing the community's voice.

Embedded across sectors

What needs to be in place before an adaptation strategy can be successful?

Long-term thinking

across the whole organisation

Evidence based interventions lived experience of the negative consequences of climate change impacts, so that conversations can refer back to and build upon those experiences long-term commitment

Effective governance and broad support

Clear leadership commitment. Strong idea of what success looks like.

Cross-service involvement from the start

What needs to be in place before an adaptation strategy can be successful?

Understanding of the science

Broken down silos

Resilience to political power fluctuations

Taking it seriously

Understanding the consequences/costs of inaction

Revolution in Board thinking

Cooperation